How long does it take before getting the result of the PCR test?

Depending on the laboratory load due to the number of tests to be analyzed in Sweden if the infection situation is still high, the test result can take a maximum of 20 hours.

What are the quarantine rules in Sweden if tested positive?

The Swedish authorities says that if you have a positive test of Covid-19, you have to be isolated until you are recovered, at least seven days have passed since you became ill. The last two days must have been without fever and that you otherwise feel healthy. This also applies if you still have occasional, mild symptoms such as a slight cough, runny nose or loss of smell and taste. It is based on the assessment that people with a normal recovery do not infect others with covid-19 after seven days.

There are special routines for severe cases that have been treated in hospital.

LOC are in close contact with regional health authorities and will have assistant from to confirm time for quarantine, depending on the circumstances.

Valid accreditations?

Team members, service industry, FIS officials will use the season bibs, together with the bracelet given out when negative test result, to have access to the arena.

Media, broadcasters, right holders, suppliers and volunteer who has been tested negative, will receive their accreditation card at the test center, with a bracelet that has to be worn during the event to show you are tested.

The bracelet must be visible and shown when passing checkpoints for red zone and zones close to red zone. See accreditation signs at the arena.

If bracelet break, bring to it to race office or media center to change it for a new one.

If you lose your bracelet, contact test center for a new one.
